

COMP2200/COMP6200 Lecture 11a – Administrative stuff

Greg Baker

21st October 2025

Assignment question mismarking

If you were marked wrong on the “classification of whether it will rain tomorrow” question in Assignment 1e. . .

- Your mark will get corrected if it turns out to be legitimately correct
- We have no idea why different people get different results in Orange from the same workspace

About the exam

- It's the same as the exercises, but invigilated
- I don't know when the exams will be held
 - It might be spread over several days
 - There aren't enough computer rooms to sit everyone on the same day
- There probably won't be questions where you write code in a notebook
- But expect to be writing code fragments in CodeRunner questions

This is the first time we've done exams in this format for COMP2200/6200, so we're still testing what does and doesn't work.

What you will bring to the exam

- Full list to be confirmed
- You can bring in one A4 sheet of paper of notes annotated on one side
 - Why not two sides? Because flipping pages over annoys some people
- I will review the exam and decide whether there should also be an official crib sheet (particularly for sklearn classes and pandas methods)
 - If there is, it will be a PDF which you will print out and can put your own annotations onto
